

Adam Reichard, MD, is a vascular surgeon specializing in performing complex endovascular aortic aneurysm repairs, along with treatment for pulmonary embolism and deep vein thrombosis. His practice focus also includes the management of carotid artery disease, chronic venous insufficiency, peripheral vascular disease, varicose veins, and hemodialysis access. After receiving his medical degree from St. George's University School of Medicine, Dr. Reichard joined Trihealth for his general surgery and vascular surgery fellowship. He is inspired by his mother, a nurse, who developed strong relationships with patients and co-workers. A native of Dayton, Ohio, Dr. Reichard and his wife have two daughters. He enjoys spending time with his family, going out to eat and golfing.
